One of my favorite time saving tips is the One Touch Rule. An example is when you need a scissors, find it, use the scissors and put it right back where it belongs. Easy! Eliminates the need to clean up at the end of the project or day.

Declutterbuzz says the One Touch Rule is a real timesaver!

Collections

If you enjoy displaying your collections of things the more aesthetically pleasing way to do so is to show the things in groups of odd numbers such as 3, 5, 7. That is designers rule number one.

Labels

Organized people like to label everything. You can buy labels or you can make your own.

Kitchen

Kitchen drawers and cabinet space can be organized with the use of organizers, dividers, and containers.

Keep or discard?

You may have spent a lifetime collecting all your memories. You may also be thinking of passing these wonderful yesterdays down to your children.

I hear from many clients their kids do not want these memories.

The good news is your old photos hold a wealth of memories and sentimental value. The not so good news is all these photos contribute to physical clutter and disorganization.

Going through boxes of photos will free up a lot of space, and show you what is worth keeping.

For practical tips about how to deal with old photos...
